Editorial

Welcome to another issue of Rosetta, where once again we have a wide range of articles, conference reports and book reviews. It has been a lot of hard work for the new Committee, but we are extremely pleased with the results.

This year we have introduced a new structure for the committee, expanding the committee and editorial board, as well as offering an opportunity for more postgraduate students to get involved with the organisation and work of the journal. For the next issue, we will be introducing a new schedule which will help everything to run more smoothly, as well as using the skills of our new Copy Editing and Publishing teams. All this should help to make everything easier, both for the journal and the contributors.

I would also like to take this opportunity to thank those who have contributed to the success of Rosetta this year. Firstly, the committee have worked extremely hard to deliver this issue, and as usual, none of this could happen without the dedication of the editors. I would also like to acknowledge the support of the University of Birmingham Roberts Fund who have been extremely generous with their support this year, and also to thank the Institute of Archaeology and Antiquity for their continued support and encouragement. Finally, I would like to thank Deborah Kerr who, while no longer an active member of the Rosetta committee, has continued to give guidance and support to the current committee, especially myself, and without whom this issue would not be 'live'.
